Kerridge & Partners is a leadership consultancy with core offerings centred on executive and director search, human capital consulting, executive coaching, board dynamic reviews and advisory. They offer top end solutions to clients across all geographies, in sectors such as energy, manufacturing, financial services, retail, infrastructure, science, dairy, food, media, telecommunications & information technology, central and local government. They thrive to work alongside the most discerning organisations and hold pride in transforming the leadership landscape.

Following their overall business strategy, Kerridge & Partners continuously improves its ICT infrastructure to best serve their clients and internal development and growth. "Our clients expect us to be leaders in business and we need to have the most suitable technology to enable us to respond rapidly to their needs," said Paul Yan, Consultant and Manager ICT and Media at Kerridge & Partners. To achieve this goal, they have been looking for an integrated system to work seamlessly with their state-of-the-art work flow and search process to deliver measurable business benefits.

Following a comprehensive review, Invenias was the solution for Kerridge & Partners, offering a combination of powerful capability yet incredible ease of use. "After a thorough evaluation of the market we concluded that Invenias was the only answer to our needs. It was far more tailored to our business than other solutions available in the market," said Paul Yan. Kerridge & Partners were attracted to the level of dynamism and energy at Invenias, "We felt that culturally there was a good fit between the two organisations. Both companies are continually looking for ways to evolve and improve the level of service they offer to their customers".

The speed and ease of implementation was another key criteria for Kerridge & Partners. They required no disruption to the day-to-day business operations and zero negative impact on client engagement. The speed of adoption of the new system has been pleasing, and they have appreciated the flexibility of training available.

They are already reaping the benefits of using Invenias. "The ease of use has meant that we immediately experienced increased efficiencies, speeding up our ability to deliver effectively to our clients. In a short period of time we have already started to see the significant difference that Invenias will make to our day to day activities." concluded Paul Yan.

“Kerridge & Partners put Invenias through a very rigorous assessment process that reflected the firm’s business values and their desire to benefit from using the best technology available. As the world’s fastest growing provider of executive search software, we feel the successful deployment at Kerridge & Partners provides further recognition of the innovation and opportunity that Invenias is bringing to the Executive Search Market,” said David Grundy, CEO, Invenias.
